Gazelles and Wolves

October - December

In the east of Mongolia, at about 2 hours of flight from Ulaan Bator, in the immense lowlands bordering with China it is esteemed that there lives a population of over two million White-tailed Gazelles. The gazelles, which live in flocks from ten up to, thousand of specimens, periodically move from north to south of this immense region, followed by the wolves.

Gazelles are hunted by placing oneself at a shooting distance, from car when possible, or leaving the hunter on the ground and slowly pushing the flock towards the hunter.

Wolves are hunted by chasing them by car and shooting while the car is moving. Every day it is possible to get about ten gazelles and 1 or 2 wolves. The accommodation is in typical Mongolian yurts.
